Assuria co-founders Terry Pudwell and Nick Connor both attended the DSEi 2011 Defence and Security Equipment International event at the London ExCel venue during September 2011 as invited guests of BAE Systems and the iGRC Consortium respectively.

Terry was invited to join a roundtable debate organised by The Engineer magazine in association with BAE Systems discussing open innovation. The debate, which focussed on how major technology leaders can access innovative technology developed by SME's, will be published in a forthcoming edition of The Engineer magazine.

As a board member of the iGRC Consortium (which is developing solutions to manage IT security in complex environments), Nick joined Dr. Phil Nobles of Cranfield University who presented a progress report on the behalf of the consortium.
